Door that sealed like a wall!

Installation depth of the the door frame - 83 mm (3.25")

CarbonCore reinforcement

When the weather is nice, every new door seals just fine. With a combination of low temperatures, wind and rain hitting the door, the situation, of course, becomes quite different. The door bends, and as a result, its sealing starts to deteriorate.

Most new entrance doors are waterproof and airtight to wind speeds of around 50 km/h. At higher speeds, drafts and water damage occur.

The revolutionary CarbonCore structure, with Weather-Seal sealing, has maintained perfect watertightness at wind speeds of 75 km/h, and excellent thermal conductivity in uncompromising tests.

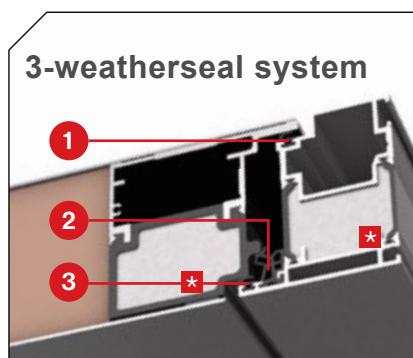

Available for an extra charge.

CarbonCore WeatherSeal
